Spinoza, the Epicurean
Authority and Utility in Materialism
Dimitris Vardoulakis

Visit the book’s webpage to find out more:

Table of Topics

Preface

1. Why does it Matter to Read Spinoza as an Epicurean?
   Different versions of Spinoza's materialism • No history of materialism • The potential that the lack of a history of materialism creates for Spinoza • Materialism and monism (no ex nihil) • Epicurean materialism: critique of authority and practical judgment

2. Authority and Utility: A Sketch
   Definition of authority • Authority as theologico-political • Tractatus de auctoritate • Authority and the structure of the Theological Political Treatise • Instrumental rationality in ancient ethics • Epicureanism and phronesis • 'ratio utilitatis' • Neoepicureanism:
   calculation of utility in materialism • Tension between authority and utility

3. On Method
   Immanent Critique • The ruse of the obvious • The parallel operation of the three epicurean themes: Authority – political monism – utility • Method of reading

Introduction: Why is Spinoza an Epicurean?

1. ‘The authority of Plato, Aristotle and Socrates carries little weight with me’: Spinoza and Epicureanism
   The dialectic of authority and utility • The epicurean school • Epicureanism as sensualism •
   Letter to Menoeceus: phronesis • Calculation of utility in Ethics IV • Two paths to virtue •
   Epicureanism as Corpuscularianism (physicalism) • Monism as rejection of creations ex nihil
   • Inseparability of mind and body • Letter 56 • Epicureanism and Christian metaphysics •
   Epicureanism, empiricism and the rise of natural sciences • Naturalism • Naturalism vs religion (Strauss) • Deleuze: Lucretius and Spinoza’s naturalism • Althusser: Spinoza and materialist politics • Guyau: Epicureanism as utilitarianism

2. The Three Themes of Spinoza’s Epicureanism: Authority, Monism, and Judgment
   The rediscovery of epicurean texts in modernity • Alison Brown: the three disparate epicurean themes in modernity • The synthesis of the three themes in Spinoza • Authority • Fear and superstition • Authority as impervious to argumentation • The theological and political origins of authority • Examples of authority • Authority and the Reformation •
   Monism • Totality precedes knowledge • The anthropological principle (mind and body) • Affect theory, new materialism, post-humanism • Practical Judgment • Totality entails practical judgment (fallibility of knowledge) • Ethics II P11 • Absurdity of monism without practical judgment (Bayle) • Phronesis • Not Kantian practical Judgment • Not Utilitarianism (fallibility and intersubjectivity) • Translation of phronesis as utility (historical context) •
   Utility in Ethics IV • Mutual interaction of the three epicurean themes
3. The Dialectic of Authority and Utility: Spinoza’s Promise
What is the utility of Spinoza’s epicureanism? • Formation of Society • The politics entailed by the dialectic of authority and utility • Spinoza’s promise of the good • The dialectic of authority and utility as heuristic device • The forgetting of authority in contemporary political philosophy and theory • The two kinds of authority • Authoritarianism without authority (Trump) • Sovereignty and authority • The dialectic of authority and utility and democracy • Democracy as the most natural constitution • Opposition to instrumentality • Instrumentality as symptom of neoliberalism • How Spinoza’s conception of utility offers a democratic alternative to neoliberal instrumentality • The fallibility of phronesis and democracy

1. Freedom as Overcoming the Fear of Death:
The Dialectic of Authority and Utility in the Preface
The strange use of the ‘freedom to philosophize’ in the subtitle • Freedom and the dialectic of authority and utility

1. ‘A free man thinks of nothing less than of death...’: Fear and Freedom in Epicurus
The lack of definition of freedom in Spinoza • Ethics IV P67 • Fear and superstition • Overcoming fear in Epicurus • Phronesis as the balance of thought and emotion in Aristotle • Phronesis as the source of virtue in Epicurus • The epicurean rejection of creation ex nihilo and Spinoza’s monism • Ataraxia • ‘Death is nothing to us’ • Freedom as exercise of phronesis (incompatible with free will) • The problem of determinism • Causality is distinguished from instrumentality • The primacy of practical knowledge • The importance of the question of error

The absence of a theory of power in Epicurus • Lucretius’s two innovations (power and history) • Religio as authority • Potestas and potential • Freedom to judge • Phronesis and history • Creation and destruction • The three stages of social formation (On the Nature of Things, book 5) • Phronesis, religio and history • Post-secularism vs. ante-secularism • Authority as both positive and negative

3. ‘Fighting for their servitude as if for salvation’: Monarchy versus Democracy
Voluntary servitude as the suspension of judgment • La Boétie • Voluntary servitude as desire (Anti-Oedipus) • Overcoming voluntary servitude as the suspension of the dialectic of authority and utility (Lordon) • Seditio • Salus • Democracy as agonistic practice • No end to the dialectic of authority and utility • The parallel operation of the three epicurean themes

2. The Power of Error:
Moses, the Prophets, and the People (Chapters 1, 2, and 3)

1. Moses: Prophesy as Communication
The double origin of authority • Moses as the exemplary figure of authority • Spinoza’s definition of prophesy • Rosselli’s Moses • Imagination ‘beyond the limits of the intellect’ • Instrumentality and fallibility • Ferdinand Bal’s Moses • Rembrandt’s Moses • Why Spinoza does not mention Moses’s order for capital punishment • The error about prophesy and natural knowledge • The interplay of potentia and potestas

2. ‘God has no particular style of speech’: The Error about God’s Potentia
God has no potestas • The prophets’ error • What is error good for • Signs and the production of authority • The prophet and the sovereign (note 2)
3. Encountering the People: Causality and Instrumentality
The error of the people • The Hebrew and the Dutch • Against Calvinist predestination • Against contractarianism • Machiavelli and the distinction of instrumentality and causality • Against Machiavelli • Against colonialism • Equality

3. Philonomianism:
Law and Origin of Finitude (Chapter 4)
The two definitions of the law • The epicurean conception of the law

1. Ratio Vivendi: Law and Living
Different translation of ratio vivendi • The distinction of human and divine law depends on two different kinds of utility • Law as calculation of utility • Philonomianism • Antinomianism • Legal positivism and decisionism • The uses of epicurean law

2. ‘You cannot make a republic without killing people’: The Tragedy of Legitimacy without Authority in Hannah Arendt
Law and foundations • Legality and constituent power • Arendt’s definition of authority • Arendt’s genealogy of authority • The modern tragedy of the legality without foundation

3. On the Origins of Finitude: History as Tragedy or Comedy?
The new as ontological ground of the political • Republicanism and authority • The relation of authority and utility in Arendt • The difficulties facing Arendt’s privileging of legality over justification • Can God be conceived as a ruler? • Spinoza’s retelling of the Fall • History as comedy • Disobedience as the condition of the possibility of the dialectic of authority and utility • Antinomianism and the three epicurean themes

4. Political Monism:
The Primacy of Utility over Authority (Chapters 5 and 6)
What comes first, authority or utility? • Resistance and power

1. ‘Society is advantageous’: Utility and Social Formation
Ceremonies as human law • The Hebrew State in the social contract tradition • Arguing from Scripture and reason • The origin of society in mutual utility • The epicurean account of the origin of society • Clastres and the principle of efficiency • Authority as an effect of utility • No absolute authority

2. Natural and Agonistic Democracy
Three inferences about the priority of utility over authority • 1. Natural democracy and the state of authority • The difference from Clastres • 2. Utility as the common denominator for natural democracy and the state of authority • 3. Agonistic democracy

3. Political Monism: The Utility of Miracles
Monism in Ecclesiastes • Rational rejection of miracles • Pierre Bayle’s attack on monism as apolitical • Hegel’s acosmism • Leo Strauss: either monism or miracles • Mercenary morality • Non-political epicureanism • The correlation of the three epicurean themes in the historical narratives of Scripture • The utility of miracles • Political Monism

5. Love Your Friend as Yourself:
The Neighbour and the Politics of Biblical Hermeneutics (Chapters 7 to 13)
Reformed authority • A new sense of obedience?
1. Monism and Interpretation: No Meaning outside the Text
   Truth of meaning vs truth of things • Monism and Biblical hermeneutics • Epicurean background to Spinoza’s method of interpretation • The epicurean theory language • The usefulness of Scripture • Neighbourly love as reciprocal utility • Truth vs falsity of meaning • Scepticism • Dogmatism • Averroism • Maimonides and the rejection of monism • The people have the last laugh • Neighbourly love and the three epicurean themes

2. Didactic Authority: The Universal as Communication
   Authority and authorship • No clash of faith and reason • Universality as Communication • The prophets vs the apostles • Authority to teach (didactic authority) • The ‘golden rule’ • The sacred as useful

3. Universality without Transcendence: Levinas contra ‘Spinozism’
   Spinoza quoting Paul’s ‘love thy neighbour’ • Freud and Žižek on Paul • Paul’s neighbourly love and violence • Is the other immanent or transcendent? Levinas’s critique • Mastery • The other and the political • ratio vivendi in Chapter 13 • Imitation of affects • Epicurean friendship in Cicero’s de finibus • Spinoza’s neighbour as a translation of the epicurean friend

6. The Freedom to Philosophize: The Two Paths to Virtue (Chapters 14 and 15)
   The centrality of Chapters 14 and 15

   1. ‘Finally’? The Politics of the Distinction between Faith and Reason
      The title of Chapter 14 • Why the separation of faith and reason is not final • 1. The double argumentative strategy of the Treatise • Neighbourly love and the calculation of utility • Is there a proof of neighbourly love? • Neighbourly love and reciprocal utility (Ethics IV P37) • Balibar: transindividuality and the double source of sociality • The individual and society in Spinoza as it affects the separation of faith and reason

   2. The Necessary Rebel: The Transversal of Faith and Reason
      What is the relation of faith and reason? • Faith and works • The figure of the necessary rebel and its six consequences • 1. The relation of natural democracy and the state of authority • 2. The impurity of the two paths to virtue • 3. Relational ontology (the non-teleological unfolding of creation and destruction) • 4. The function of the Treatise’s epigram in relation to the necessary rebel • 5. Reciprocal utility and the three kinds of knowledge from the Ethics, or the impossibility of identifying the calculation of utility either with the imagination or with adequate ideas • 6. The dialectic of authority and utility as a mutual contamination

   3. The Freedom to Philosophize: Freedom from Personal Authority and the Freedom to Transverse
      The first use of the freedom to philosophize since the title page • The freedom to philosophize and the relation of faith and reason • The freedom to philosophize and faction • Authority and sedition • Authority and scriptural interpretation • The critique of the free will in Spinoza • The free will and secularism • Freedom from the free will as neither liberal nor republican notion of freedom • Freedom from the free will and the transversal of faith and reason or the two paths to virtue
7. Fear and Power:
Natural Right and Authorization in Spinoza and Hobbes (Chapter 16)
The third part of the Theological Political Treatise and natural right • The coextensivity of right with power and ‘might is right’ in Plato’s Republic • The liberal and radical democratic interpretations • The conjunction of potentia and potestas and Hobbes

1. Epicurean Communities: Fear and Utility
Did Spinoza know Hobbes’s works? • Hobbes’s epicureanism • Self-preservation and fear in De Cive • Hobbes’s double challenge • The construction of sociality in Hobbes through mutual fear • Spinoza’s anti-humanism and the rejection of privileged emotions • Reciprocal utility as the construction of sociality in Spinoza

2. The Robber in the Night: On the Promise
Fear and the social contract • Hobbes’s highway robber and the obligation to obey agreements arising through fear • The political and the fear of punishment • Kant’s outlaw and the relation between morality and the politics • Spinoza’s highway robber and the social contract as the exercise of the calculation of utility • Spinoza’s promise and the impossibility of absolute power

3. The Right to Resist or the Fallibility of Judgment? On the Limits of Authorization
Fear and the delimitation of sovereignty in Hobbes • The right to resist and the sovereign • Individuation and self-preservation • Democracy as the basis of constitutions • The dialectic of authority and utility leads to the mutual delimitation of the people and the sovereign • Negri and the lack of recognition of the dialectic of authority and utility • The fallibility of judgment and the relation of potentia and potestas • The power of democracy • The calculation of utility and the threat of slave • Agonism in the dialectic of authority and utility • Hobbes or Spinoza?

8. Theocracy:
On the State of Authority (Chapters 17 and 18)
The structure of the Theological Political Treatise • The Hebrew state as paradigmatic of the state of authority and the path of the emotions leading to virtue

1. Josephus: The Anti-authoritarianism of Theocracy
The coincidence of religious and civil law • The word ‘theocracy’ • Josephus in modernity • 1. Josephism and biblical hermeneutics • 2. Theocracy and the theory of the three constitutions • The Hebrew state as foil to address contemporary political issues • Anti-authoritarianism: against mortal kings (1 Samuel 8) • The primary constitutional form

2. Between Tyranny and Revolution: The Limits of the State of Authority
How far does the power of the state extend? • The mutual delimitation of rulers and ruled • 1. The epicurean dialectic of authority and utility in a state relying on obedience (ratio utilitatis) • 2. Obedience and ideology • Spinoza’s materialism: focusing on the effects of actions • The difference from Althusser and Foucault • Not functionalism • The case of Alexander the Great • 3. Social cohesion • Citizenship and exile in the Hebrew state • The coincidence of religious and civil law compared to biopolitics • Hatred • 4. The people as the most powerful entity in a state • Preventing authoritarianism and tyranny • People as the most powerful entity and the idea of democracy in the Political Treatise
3. The Fragmentation of Authority: On the Reasons for the Destruction of the Hebrew State

Theocracy like a democracy: equality • The fear of God's voice and the establishment of Moses's authority • The cause of the destruction of the Hebrew state: the election of the Levites to priesthood • Moses's succession planning: fracturing the theologico-political authority • Exodus 32:26–28 • The contamination of the theological authority of the Levites by the political • The cause of the destruction of the Hebrew state and fractured authority • From authority to monarchy (and authoritarianism) • The ruse of sovereignty • Five theses on theocratic biopolitics

9. The Authority to Abrogate:
The Two Paths to Virtue and the Internal Enemy (Chapters 19 and 20)

Natural democracy and the state of authority are 'more theory than praxis' • The mutual contamination of the path of reason and the emotions • Agonistic democracy

1. The Path of the Passions: Neighbourly Love as a Political Principle

The sovereign in charge of both civil and religious law • Erastianism • The Collegiants • The politicization of neighbourly love • Erastianism as limiting sovereignty • Sovereignty and neighbourly love • Sovereignty and instrumental rationality • Epicurean erastianism • How to be pious by being impious, and how to be impious by being pious • The transversal from the emotions to reason • The hidden reference to the Sermon on the Mount • The calculation of utility and stasis • Neighbourly love and resistance to power

2. The Path of Reason: The Unendurable in Politics

The path of reason and freedom • Spinoza's republicanism • Freedom to judge and to speak (but not to act) • The unbearable • Indignation in the Political Treatise • The transversal from reason to the emotions

3. The Right to Abrogate: The Internal Enemy and Democracy

The two senses of internal enmity • Negative conflict (sedition) • Sedition and the part of the emotions • Sedition as the history of Christianity • Sedition and the path of reason • Exciting the emotions of the vulgus • Positive conflict (stasis) • The authority to abrogate • Intensification of judgment • Stasis and epicureanism • Stasis and imitation • The point where the path transverse • Democracy and the dialectic of authority and utility • Agonistic democracy as the materialization of the relation of natural democracy and the state of authority • Universality and singularity • Agonistic Praxis

Conclusion:
The Limitation of Spinoza's Epicureanism